Bridging the Gap Between Scrum, UX and Design Practices. Professional Scrum™ with User Experience (PSU) is a 2-day hands-on course where students who already have a fundamental understanding of Scrum and some experience using it will learn how to integrate modern UX practices into the way they are working in Scrum and how to work most effectively within Scrum Teams. Design work can sometimes feel slow, and not well suited to quick agile cadences and Scrum events, but that isn't the case.

UX involvement on an Agile team means more than just working a sprint ahead to quickly and continuously deliver ideas to product owners, stakeholders, and developers. It also means being a present and active contributor in the current sprint, with all its meetings and ceremonies. Simply put, UX professionals working in Agile should not skip Scrum ceremonies or tune out during them. When we decide to skip or not fully participate in ceremonies, we risk losing sight of:

In this case, UX is more like part of the requirement and therefore more behaving like a stakeholder, not directly participating in Scrum, but of course being available for questions if there should be any. From my point of view, it all depends on how tight the people are tied together when it comes to the actual implementation of the product.
