Trading Whining for Honor, Part 1 | FamilyLife®
Dennis: Bob, when a child does have a parent who says no to spending the night at a friend's house, we've had that happen among our teenagers over the years, and when their voices raise to a higher pitch, their face begins to take on a contorted sort of look of sorts, and they begin to whine and complain, I then just say in a calm voice, I say, "You know, if you would not raise this to an emotional level, if you would speak with me respectfully" and basically do what they're talking about ...
